Water quality certification for certain wetlands

Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

Bill Summary: A recent U. S. Supreme Court decision limited the types of waters for which Army Corps of Engineers discharge permits are required. For discharges into wetlands that are no longer subject to Corps permitting, this legislation puts into state law some of the federal provisions governing the issuance of Corps permits. These provisions are in addition to other requirements of state law that regulate discharges into wetlands.

Fiscal Estimate: Because the Department of Natural Resources was processing and issuing water quality certifications for these waters before the Supreme Court decision, no additional workload or fiscal impact from that workload level is anticipated. There is no local government involvement in the permitting process, therefore, no local cost.

Long-Range Fiscal Implications

None.
