Description Admissibility of a digitally produced photograph, film, motion picture, audio, or video and providing a penalty

Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

This bill allows digital reproductions of photographs, films, motion pictures, audio or videotapes to be used as evidence under certain circumstances. This bill also creates a Class A misdemeanor for persons who knowingly submit altered digital reproductions. Penalties include fines of up to $10,000 and 9 months in jail, or both.

The Department can not predict the number of persons who will be convicted under the provisions of this bill. If a court places an offender on probation, it will increase the Department's costs by approximately $2,600 annually, per person [FY09 costs].

Counties will incur increased costs if offenders are given a jail term.
