Description Including crop insurance proceeds in the manufacturing and agricultural tax credit

Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

Under current law, a person may claim the manufacturing and agricultural tax credit on the basis of the person's income from manufacturing or agriculture. The starting point for calculating the credit is determining the person's production gross receipts, which are the gross receipts from the lease, rental, license, sale, exchange, or other disposition of tangible personal property that is either manufactured by the claimant on property assessed as manufacturing property or produced, grown, or extracted by the claimant on or from property assessed as agricultural property.

Under the bill, insurance proceeds that are received by a person due to the destruction of, or damage to, crops are included in the person's production gross receipts and, therefore, included in the calculation of the credit's value.

Based on an analysis of 2016 individual income tax returns reporting taxable crop insurance proceeds and federal crop disaster payments, most of those returns did not show significant net farm income or tax attributable to agricultural activities. As such, those farms would still not generate a credit under the bill. Data is not available for a comparable analysis of corporate agricultural credit claimants, but the department expects a similar pattern. Consequently, the provision is expected to increase agricultural tax credit claims by a minimal amount. Due to the unpredictability of disasters, the impact of the provision could vary significantly from year to year.
