Policy Problem Addressed by the Rule

Under 2013 Wisconsin Act 306, the Department must define ineligible costs related to community programs and services. The proposed rule change will create PI 80, which defines the costs that cannot be included by school districts in Fund 80 (the revenue source for community programs and services).

Summary of Rule's Economic and Fiscal Impact on Specific Businesses, Business Sectors, Public Utility Rate Payers, Local Governmental Units and the State's Economy as a Whole (Include Implementation and Compliance Costs Expected to be Incurred)

Local:

It is unknown how many existing school district expenditures on community programs and services will remain eligible costs under this rule. To the extent that school district expenditures change based on the definition of eligible costs defined as a result of this rule, school district revenue limits and local property taxes may change. In 2013-14, school districts levied $79,560,060 for community service fund programs.

State:

None.

Benefits of Implementing the Rule and Alternative(s) to Implementing the Rule

The rule change gives the Department legal authority to prevent ineligible costs from being allocated to a school district's community programs and services fund. Without a rule, the Department provided guidance on what constituted ineligible costs but it was only advisory.

Long Range Implications of Implementing the Rule

It is unknown how many existing school district expenditures on community programs and services will remain eligible costs under this rule change.
