4 retaliation for reporting to any state official abuse or neglect in certain
5 facilities, providing a cause of action and providing a penalty.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, any person may report suspected abuse or neglect of an elderly person to the county agency designated to receive and investigate such reports. No employer may discharge or otherwise discriminate against an employee who makes an abuse or neglect report to the county agency. An employee who is discharged or discriminated against because of the report has a private cause of action against the employer.

Currently, no person may intentionally retaliate or discriminate against any resident or employe of a long-term care facility for contacting or providing information to any state official, or for initiating, participating in, or testifying in any action against the facility. Violators of this prohibition may be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 6 months or both.

This bill provides that any person who is discharged or otherwise retaliated or discriminated against for contact made or information provided by or on behalf of that person to any state official or to the board on aging and long-term care may commence an action in circuit court for damages incurred as a result of the discharge, retaliation or discrimination together with punitive damages, court costs and attorney fees.

The bill also prohibits any person from discharging, retaliating or otherwise discriminating against any person on whose behalf another person makes a report or otherwise cooperates in the reporting or investigating of the report. Violators of this prohibition are subject to a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment of not more than 6 months or both.
