Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, with limited exceptions, no person may sell alcohol beverages to a consumer unless the seller possesses a license or permit authorizing the sale. A Class "A" license authorizes the retail sale of fermented malt beverages (beer), in original containers, for consumption off the licensed premises and is generally held by such retailers as grocery stores, liquor stores, and convenience stores. A Class "B" license authorizes the retail sale of beer for consumption on or off the licensed premises and is generally held by such retailers as taverns and restaurants. Current law generally prohibits a brewer, brewpub, or beer wholesaler from furnishing anything of value to a Class "B" beer retailer, but there are many exceptions, including for selling to the retailer equipment and supplies at fair market value. This prohibition does not apply with respect to a Class "A" beer retailer.

This bill authorizes Class "A" beer retailers to sell beer in growlers that are filled and sealed on the retail licensed premises. The bill defines "growler" as a refillable and resealable container exceeding 24 ounces in volume used to package beer for consumption away from the property where sold. The bill also generally prohibits a brewer, brewpub, or beer wholesaler from furnishing anything of value to a Class "A" beer retailer that sells beer in growlers if the thing of value is associated with or related to the sale of beer in growlers. However, there are various exceptions, including for selling to the retailer equipment and supplies at fair market value.

SENATE BILL 283

Under current law, a brewer holding a brewer's permit may, among other activities authorized under its brewer's permit: 1) manufacture, bottle, package, and store beer on the brewery premises; 2) sell and deliver the brewer's own beer to wholesalers; 3) if the brewer produces 300,000 or fewer barrels of beer per year, sell and deliver its own beer to retailers; and 4) sell at retail, without a retail license, the brewer's own beer and other Wisconsin-made beer at the brewery premises and at one off-site retail outlet of the brewer.

This bill authorizes a brewer, at the request of a customer, to package and sell at retail, on brewery premises or at the brewer's off-site retail outlet, growlers of the brewer's own beer and of other Wisconsin-made beer.
